Bowker was cited for saving two lives in the choppy ocean last year when power failed on a speedboat. Goethals is particularly happy about the affair because he is one of those rescued by Bowker.

Speech Therapists Aiding Nearly 900 Local Students

Nearly 900 Torrance students are getting help of some kind with speech problems, while another 430 students are on a "waiting list."

That was the gist of a report presented to the Board of Education Tuesday night by Assistant Superintendent Louis Kaplan, who reported that six speech therapists work with local children.

Of 4934 students tested in a recent speech survey, some 1300, or about one in four, needed some type of help with a speech problem. Those tested included all students in grades 2 and 9, plus students of other grades who were referred by their teachers.

Eighty-five per cent of the speech difficulties were in articulation—correct pronunciation of words. These included substitution of sounds ("wabbit" instead of "rabbit"), distortions, and additions of sounds to words.

SOME FIVE per cent of the cases involved students who stutter. Usually, no direct therapy is given, but conferences are held with parents to try to alleviate conditions causing the problem.

Another five per cent of those tested have various voice problems, such as pitch, nasality, or hoarseness. About half of these are getting direct therapy.

Twenty-five children are getting lip-reading instructions because of partial loss of hearing. Other speech problems include foreign-speaking youngsters, those with cerebral palsy, and other less common difficulties.

SIX SPEECH therapists, each assigned to five schools, work with individuals or small groups in speech therapy on a once-a-week basis. Two of the therapists work on a "block-of-time" schedule, where speech help is given several times a week for a six-week period, followed by a half-day per week schedule for the rest of the year. Follow-up work with parents and teachers is a requirement also.

A speech and hearing therapist is a person who has completed requirements for a California teaching credential, plus additional courses in teaching remedial speech, psychology, and teaching of lip reading. Several Torrance therapists have masters' degrees and belong to the American and California Speech and Hearing Assn.

Therapists report that other difficulties often contribute to speech problems. They work with parents to straighten out any other problems, since much work can be done at home. Instructions are given as to how the child may be helped.

Most of the children receiving therapy are in lower grades.
